Accordingly, it enacted a special law known as the Disabled Persons Protection and Welfare Act, 1982. We do not have separate national policy for ID in our country but we have some laws and policies for disabled that include plan, program and legal provision to ensure equal opportunity for full participation of PWDs. These provisions are summarized as follows : (a) National Civil Code 1910 BS, (b) The Constitution of Nepal, 1990, (c) Education Act 1971, (d) Special Education Policy , (e) Children Act 1992, (f) Local Self-Governance Act 1999, ((g) Labor Act, 2056, (h) National Disability Policy 2053(BS), (i) Tenth National Development Plan 2003-2008. Now the Ministry of Women, Children and Social Welfare has formed a

Disabled Services National Coordination Committee under the Chairmanship of Minister to regulate the services and implemented the and to make national policy for the disabled including the people with ID. .

An estimated 10% of the population in Nepal have some form of disability of which mental retardation is one prominent disability. It is estimated by a sample survey conducted by AWMR in the year 1989 that about 720,000 persons, ie, 4.06% of the total country's population are mentally retarded nearly 40% of them being under the age of 14. AWMR, its district branches, school management committees are responsible for the community based rehabilitation programmes at the grass root level. AWMR is the only National level NGO that is established to provide integrated individualized and properly adapted special education and comprehensive services to the people with ID and their families. At present acceptance and inclusion of IDs in the society is our main concern but it is not only AWMR's responsibility. Thus, we are trying to cooperate with government and other related NGOs and officials on this part and we are striving hard for the implementation of the inclusive education program to be implemented by HMG/Nepal very soon. By law, special education, has been defined as a regular education for children with special needs.
